1. Get Involved In Her Extra-Curricular Activities

She is most likely involved in extra-curricular activities outside of class. By joining some of these activities, you would put yourself in a position where she gets to see you and feel like the both of you have commonalities. It makes it a lot easier for you to talk to her because you will both be engaged in an activity that she is interested in.

2. Talk In Class

She needs to know that you exist. You should try to talk a lot more in class. It could be answering questions asked by the teacher or just making general conversation with other classmates or a combination of both. The more she hears your voice, the easier it will be for her to find similarities with you or react to what you are saying. Once you notice that she is, it would be a lot easier to turn to her and ask her what she thinks about what you are saying.

3. Eat Close To Her Cafeteria Table

She needs to know that you are there and that you are someone worth talking to. Thereby, the more ways you can enable her to see you, the better. If you find a place to eat in the cafeteria that is closer to her table and close enough for her to see you, she will be able to glance at your table from time to time. These are the moments that you may be able to establish eye contact with her and smile. If she looks over and smiles back a number of times, she is basically inviting you to come over and talk to her.

4. Eat At Her Cafeteria Table

You can take this a step further by actually eating at her table. If it is a big enough table, you can get there a little bit earlier with your friends and find a spot. When she arrives, she would be curious as to who you guys are. This is when you will have an opportunity to establish eye contact and smile at her. If she smiles back and goes ahead and sits down with her friends alongside her, you now have an opportunity to start talking to her as well as her friends.

5. Get Involved In Sports

She may not necessarily be the most sporty girl but there is a good chance that she does enjoy watching sports in some capacity. Try to get involved in a sport at school that fits you. Don't get involved in something that you don't like just to get her attention. Ensure that you like the sport. Do all you can to get good at it. She may come to watch you practice or watch a game. If you are able to establish sustained eye contact in these moments, this is your opportunity to move in and talk to her.

6. Get To Know Her Friends

Her friends are a big part of her life and sense of identity. By starting to talk to her friends and getting to know them, you are making yourself known to them. They will begin to establish an opinion about you. If you have done a good job in making them feel like you are a great guy, they may feel obligated to introduce you to their other friends. She would be a part of this crowd. This is how you can get into her circle and start talking to her in a very easy and natural manner.

7. Answer Her School Work Questions

If you know that she is having a hard time with a particular subject that you are good at and you have shown that you are good at in class, you can answer her questions. She may be talking to someone in class about how she couldn't figure out the homework that was assigned by a teacher. This is when you can step in and start answering some of her questions. This is another very easy way to begin the process of talking to her and giving her an opportunity to know you.

8. Make People Laugh

Get into the habit of making the people around you laugh. Whether you are walking in the hallways with them or at the cafeteria or in class, just try making them laugh. If she happens to be in a nearby crowd and you are making people around you laugh, she will notice. She may listen in and start laughing herself. Once you have gotten her to this point, you can easily look her way and smile. If she smiles back at you, there is a good chance that she would like for you to come over and talk to her.

9. Get To Class Before She Does

If you are already at your desk whenever she gets to class, she will notice you. This will also give her an opportunity to either start greeting you or vice versa. She knows that she has seen you before and she may just feel the need to be polite in saying hello. From here, you can say hello the next time you see her in class and this could lead to further conversation down the road. Perhaps you could follow up the hello with asking her how she found the homework that was assigned the day before.

10. Get To Class Earlier

You need to get her to notice you and be in an environment where you have the best chance of talking to her. By getting to class earlier than anyone else, there is a good chance that at some point she is also going to walk into the class early. This is where you will have the opportunity to actually talk to her without having to worry about other distractions. You can talk about class or about what she did over the weekend.

11. Lend Her Something

She may be short of a pen or paper. This is your opportunity to grab your extra pen or paper and hand it over to her. This is how she gets to look right into your eyes while you smile at her. She has now noticed you. The next time she comes to school or class, she may acknowledge you with some eye contact or a smile. This would be your opportunity to open a conversation with her.

12. Share Your Textbook With Her

She may not have the textbook required for the class and you see that. This is your opportunity to have her share your textbook with you while you are in class. She may move over to your desk to do it or vice versa. By sharing a textbook in this way, you are both in close proximity and will have the opportunity to talk. This also works the other way around. You could deliberately forget your textbook that day or just keep it hidden in your backpack and ask if you could share hers. From here, you can talk to her.

13. Offer Her And Her Friends A Ride Home

Even though you are offering both her and her friends a ride home, your main goal is to get her attention. By offering both her and her friends a ride home, you are showing how generous you are and you are also giving her friends a good impression of you. This is how you begin the process of building rapport with both her and her friends. The next time you see them, they may invite you to do something with them to repay your kindness and this may be your best opportunity to talk to her.

14. Offer Her A Ride Home

If you just can't seem to get the opportunity to offer both her and her friends a ride home, you shouldn't let that stop you from offering her a ride home if she needs it. This would still be an opportunity for you to be one on one with her and thereby have an opportunity to talk to her. She will feel obligated to talk to you because of your kind gesture and this is when you will have the chance to get her to start knowing who you are.

15. Run For Something

If there is an opportunity to run for some kind of position in your class or school, it's a great idea to do it. It should be something that you are comfortable running for. However, if you get into the habit of running for a position in school or class, it gets your name out there. Even if you don't win the position, you have still gotten people to become aware of you. This is very helpful in getting her to notice you. She may even decide to vote for you or help you win. This is how you get to talk to her.

16. Be Confident

Always show an air of confidence when you are in class, the school grounds or out and about. This kind of confidence is what will automatically grab her attention. She will notice you more and more. She will wonder what it is about you that makes you this confident. She may be drawn to you and may look your way often. These are the moments where you establish eye contact with her and smile. If she smiles back, she may want you to come in and talk to her.

17. Make More Friends

Get yourself active in your school community and try as hard as you can to make more friends. It doesn't matter all that much if they are just like you. In fact, the more diverse your friends are, the better. The more friends you make in the school, the more people talk about you. At some point, she may hear about you from a friend that you recently made. She suddenly starts looking at you a lot more and at some point, if you were to establish eye contact with her, she may want you to talk to her.

18. Have Others Gather Information For You

In other words, the more people you know in the school, the more you can have them find out more about her or get around her. If you have a whole lot of people in the school watching her and interacting with her then coming back and reporting to you, you are able to gather a lot of information about her. You will know where she hangs out and what she likes. This enables you to start understanding the kind of topics that she would be most receptive to talking about when you do decide to talk to her.

19. Hang Out Where She Does

You can make it a habit to show up where she tends to hang out. She may love going to the local mall or favorite eatery. This is your opportunity to start showing up at those places. When she sees you there, she may think that she recognizes you from school but may not be entirely certain. This is your opportunity to go in and introduce yourself. You could tell her your name and that you share a class or two with her, etc. This is how you can open up conversation and see where it leads.

20. Love Her Hobbies And Talk About Them

She may have other hobbies that have nothing to do with school nor connected to it. By keeping your ears open and learning about what they are, you can start engaging in them as well. This way, you can start talking about it in class to a friend or classmate. When she overhears this, she may turn to you and instantly start talking to you about the same hobby. You have now generated curiosity on her part and an instant connection.

21. Have Social Events And Invite Her

Have more social events or parties that you organize and make it a point to invite her as well. You can let her know about a few of the other people that she may know that will be showing up to the social event or party so that she doesn't feel like she would be the odd one out. You can even tell her that she can bring her friends. This is how you get her to notice you and be willing to talk to you in the future.

22. Go To More Social Events

There is a good chance that the more social events or parties or get-togethers that you go to, you are bound to bump into her. Even if you may not always feel like going, you should make it a habit to at least show up to these events for some time. This gives you the opportunity to meet her outside of the school setting and she may feel a lot more open and carefree in these environments. These moments would be a perfect opportunity to start talking to her with ease.

23. Take Her Classes

Make it a point to take as many of her classes as you can. You need to put yourself in an environment where she becomes more and more familiar with you and recognizes you. It may even prompt her to tell you that it is amazing that you both seem to take the same classes. This is how you have created an instant connection with her that enables the both of you to have something safe to talk about.

24. Tutor Her Friends

If you are really good at a particular subject in class, make it a point to tutor some of her friends if they need it. This is how you get her friends to really like you and appreciate you for what you do. They may tell her about your tutoring and she may become impressed. This is how you have now established yourself as a person that can be trusted and you have opened up a channel of communication.

25. Go On Class Trips

Try your best not to skip school or class trips even though you may feel like you would much rather do something else. These class trips can actually give you the opportunity to talk to her in an environment that isn't as stressful as school. These are the moments where she is most likely more relaxed and stress free. She may be looking forward to the class trip and this is when you can take the opportunity to show both your enthusiasm and also start talking to her about it.

26. Get Good Grades

Getting good grades gets you noticed. Your classmates will soon start talking about how well you did in this or that test. Teachers will begin to give you a lot more attention in class. This is when you start getting more and more of an opportunity to get her to notice you. She may establish eye contact with you a few times and you should smile at her. She may even come over and ask you about certain subjects and what you think about them. This is another great opportunity to talk to her.

27. Avoid Skipping School

Do the best you can to avoid skipping days of school. The day you skip could have been the day that you would have had an opportunity to talk to her alone in class while waiting for the class to start. The day you skip could have been the day that she actually came out to the field to watch the athletes play. Unfortunately, if you weren't on the field, she wouldn't have seen you. If she doesn't see you, you don't have the opportunity to get her attention and eventually talk to her.

28. Dress Better And Set Yourself Apart

You don't have to wear the latest designer clothes but you do have to show that you care about your fashion sense and how you present yourself. She is going to be looking at the way guys dress around her. By taking good care in dressing good and being fashionable, you are instantly setting yourself apart from the other guys who just wake up and throw anything on. This may actually be all she needs to come over and compliment your shirt or shoes. This is how you get a great chance to talk to her.

29. Have More Girl Friends

Make it a habit to befriend as many girls as you can in school. The more girls you are friends with in school, the more it seems like you are popular and that girls have a liking for you. It also makes you seem like you really know how to connect with girls. When you really try to make more friends who are girls, they will be your ambassadors. They will talk about you around her and she will learn about who you are. This is when she may be more open to looking your way or having you talk to her.

30. Talk To More Girls Around Her

As much as it can be very effective to have loads of girl friends, it's also a good thing to talk to girls whenever you are around her. The more girls you talk to whenever you are around her, the more she notices and wonders about you. You make her curious about you and she wants to know why you are so popular with the ladies. This makes her feel that there is something about you that she doesn't know about. This is when she may take the initiative to talk to you or be constantly looking in your direction.

31. Talk About Your Adventures

If you have had some really amazing experiences in life, don't be shy about talking about them while she is within earshot. This is what will get her to really start noticing you and really envisioning what it would have been like to go on those adventures with you. Perhaps you have visited some of the most dazzling locations in the world, talk about it. Perhaps you have seen the rarest animal on a trip to Alaska, talk about it. The more she overhears stuff like this, the more she will want to talk to you.

32. Active Lifestyle

She has to get the sense of just how active you are both in and out of school. If you give her the sense of just how involved you are with life, it naturally makes it seem as though you would be a really exciting guy to be around or hang out with. When you are talking to your classmates or schoolmates about what you did over the weekend or what project you are working and she happens to be within earshot and hears it, she will be really curious about you and may look your way several times. She is inviting you over.

33. Organize School Activities

She wants to know just how engaged you are with your peers and how much of a leader you are. If you have established a reputation in school as a leader who organizes school events, you have put yourself on an admirable hierarchy. This shows her that there is a lot more to you than just being a regular student. She instantly has a reason to talk to you and may even want you to help co-organize a school or class event with her.

34. Get Your Name In School Publications

Try to do things in school that are news worthy. Just try to find ways to get your name in the school newspaper or magazine as much as possible. This is how she really starts getting a sense of who you are. You may get there through being active in sports , school politics, etc. The more your name shows up on a publication, the more reason you will give her to look your way in school and try to get your attention. These are the moments that you can easily start a conversation with her.

35. Get To Know Faculty

As much as it is helpful to get to know your peers in school, you should also get to know your teachers. You need to make your teachers feel like you are someone that they can trust. If they start feeling this level of trust with you, they will start putting you in charge of the class a lot more when they are not around. This makes you a figure of authority. She may respect this and be impressed by it because you are setting yourself apart from the other boys. This would be an opportunity to talk to her.

36. Get Active On Social Media

By becoming more and more active on social media, you are getting engaged in a medium that she most likely uses and feels very comfortable in. Start trying to build your social media following. The word will get around about how great your posts are and the kind of following that you are building. This may entice her to make a friend request to you at some point and from here you can get into a conversation with her.

37. Befriend Her Friends On Social Media

You can also use social media to help you talk to her friends. The more you interact with her friends on social media, the more of a trail you leave behind. She is able to follow this trail back to you. When she knows that you get along with her friends, it is easier for her to believe that you will get along with her as well. This is what may spur her to want to talk to you.

38. Show Your Talent

If you have a talent for something that is really creative, don't be shy about showing it. Perhaps you are really good at singing or playing a musical instrument. Ensure that you perform on stage for your class or school to see. You really have to show it. You could even perform for your friends somewhere in school where you know she will happen to show up. Perform anywhere. Just make sure that you show your talent. She will most likely be impressed by it and will want to get to know you more.

39. Share Your Similar Talents

She may also be talented at something that is similar to your own. Perhaps she plays the flute or the piano, etc. If you also have a talent in these, let it be known. The moment she hears you playing, she may feel an instant connection because she also has the same talent. She may then feel inspired to talk to you about it and you have now both created an instant rapport with each other.

40. Share Similar Interests

If you have overheard her talk about a particular interest in something, try to learn more about it. She may talk about a TV show that she really likes for example. This is your opportunity the next time you know that you will be around her to begin to talk about that particular TV show. This is when she overhears you and even gets excited. She is excited that someone else likes the same TV show and may instantly begin to talk to you as a result.

41. Own A Car

Owning a car really sets you apart. The moment that she knows that you have a car, she is already feeling a sense of your maturity. There is something empowering about owning a car. She knows that you have a degree of control and power over it. This may also show her that you have quite a degree of control and power in your own life in general. Knowing this may impress her about you and she may feel the need to want to start any kind of conversation with you.

42. Go On Real Vacations

Make the effort to take real vacations when school is out for the season. This means that when you return to school, you would have an incredible story to tell. You would really be setting yourself apart from your schoolmates because you would be one of the few that has such exciting stories to share about your time off. Perhaps you travelled to a foreign country on your vacation, etc. This is the perfect opportunity to show off and get her looking your way, smiling and curious.

43. Be Silly

When you are able to be silly around your schoolmates, you are able to make them laugh and loosen up. It also makes you seem like a guy who doesn't take everything so seriously. You appear to be a fun guy to be around. This is how you get her to want to be around you as much as possible. She knows that you are going to be fun around your peers and she wants to be part of that environment. Getting her to loosen up in these environments opens her up a lot more to talking to you.

44. Be Controversial

You don't have to do anything that will get you in trouble. However, don't always be afraid to say something that may not always be that politically correct or that may not always be the most popular opinion. When you are able to be a little bit controversial in your views, you get attention. Some of it will be good and some bad. However, you get her to really notice you and your aura of independence. This can be very appealing to her and open her up to talking to you.

45. Be Active In Your Local Community

There is a decent chance that she is also involved in some capacity in her community outside of school or that she will go to community events. Make it a point to be involved. Take part in charity drives that may happen on the weekends or helping to set up a carnival in the local park, etc. These are all opportunities to have her notice just how engaged you are in the community. It may motivate her to want to help you out and this would be a perfect opportunity to get to talk to her.

46. Walk A Pet

If you know that she tends to walk her pet in the local park on the weekends, this would be your opportunity to meet her there with your own pet and thereby instantly have something to talk about. You may get a pet of your own or just volunteer to walk one of your friend's pets. You could even volunteer to walk a pet from your local animal shelter. By putting yourself in this environment, she instantly feels a connection with you when she sees you and will want to talk to you.

47. Host Events At A Local Hang Out Spot

Make it a point to host these kind of events as much as you can. You could choose any area of interest to host as long as you know it tends to attract a lot of people. You could host a dance over the weekend at a local hang out spot and be the DJ. You could host a fun trivia event at your local pub, etc. The goal is to be a host and get your name out there. There is a good chance that she may show up at one of the events that you are hosting and this would be a great opportunity to talk to her.

48. Have Your Mutual Friends Put In A Good Word

You may share a friend or two with her. This is your opportunity to get your mutual friends to talk to her about you in a subtle way. They would be your ambassadors and may mention some exciting activities you did over the weekend or some big project that you are working on. This may inspire her to want to talk to you.

49. Get Involved In The Same Course

There may be a course that is very near and dear to her heart. She may spend a lot of time in the local children's hospital helping the kids or the staff out, etc. This is your opportunity to get involved in a course that she holds dear. Ensure that you truly care about the course otherwise she will see right through you. By getting involved in a course that she cares about, she feels an instant connection with you that goes deep. It gives you something in meaningful to talk about.

50. Tutor Her Privately

She may be having a hard time with a particular subject. You can volunteer to tutor her outside of school on your own private time. This can be a very effective way to talk to her and have something safe to talk about in the beginning. It will also build trust between you and this can go a long way in getting her to open up to you over time.
